May Sell Horses And Buy Big Mike

The Board of Public Works, it is understood, is planning to ask the town meeting to allow them to sell the team of horses bought a few years ago, the sale to be made in the interests of efficiency. It is felt that the present team and dump-wagon are much more expensive than the trucks would be.

The Board will also probably ask that the Town make the final payment on the controversial Big Mike, the Austin 77 combination plow, scraper and scarifier which it has been buying on the installment plan.

School Board Race

Attracting Aspirants

The fight for the school committee vacancy provided the only interest in the local election campaign up to noon yesterday. Three candidates took out papers for the vacancy, with Clifford Marshall of Pasho street taking his out early in the week and Harold Houston of Bancroft road and Charles J. Bailey of 46 Chestnut street taking them out yesterday morning. Candidates for re-election to two of the three positions are Mrs. Julie S. Musk and Arthur R. Lewis.

The big question mark remained in the Board of Public Works race where only George Riley is in the field for two positions, Harry Playdon and William D. McIntyre having failed to commit themselves. It was becoming increasingly evident that Edward P. Hall would run.

All papers must be filed with 55 signatures next Thursday evening at 5. Contests at present loom only in the selectman's race, where Roy Wilson is battling incumbent Roy Hardy, in the school committee, and in the board of health where Frank Collins is fighting Frank Stacey. There is a possibility that there may be more candidates in this last field.

WHERE TO FIND THEM

We are attempting to stabilize the positions of a number of the Townsman features, starting with this issue. Unless extraordinary conditions arise, locals will be found on page 3 hereafter, 25 years ago on page 2, editorial page 4, what's going on page 1, West Parish page 11, Vale and Shawshen page 8, classifieds page 10.

It's A Secret

If you want to hear Rev. Mr. Andover Pastor speak this Sunday, you'll have to scurry around a bit, because only the ministers themselves know which church they are going to conduct services in. The general exchange is being tried as an experiment in church unity. It has been tried successfully in other communities, and was suggested here by Thaxter Eaton.

The ministers who will preach in unknown pulpits Sunday morning are the Rev. Mr. Noss, Rev. Mr. Johnson, Rev. Mr. Overstreet, Rev. Mr. Savage, Rev. Mr. Butterfield, and Rev. Mr. Marzahn.

Lima Conference

Writer To Speak

The November Club will meet on Monday with Dr. Roland Hall Sharp as the speaker of the afternoon. Dr. Sharp will take his hearers on a 20,000 mile journey by plane to South America, with motion pictures in color and last-minute news items. He believes that we know far too little about our neighbor continent and particularly about its political trends.

His subject, "Meet South America," is particularly timely as he has just returned from the Lima conference, where he was special correspondent for the Christian Science Monitor. His will be first-hand authentic information on this highly important conclave.

The November club feels extremely fortunate to offer Dr. Sharp to its members and friends, for he has many more invitations to lecture than he can possibly fill.

Technical Director Of "Lost Horizon" To Present His Pictorial Scoops Of The Far East Aflame

From the high plateaus of Tibet, through the Gobi Desert, across China's war fronts and flood areas, on to the Siberian border, through Manchukuo, over water to the Japanese Empire and Formosa with its dreaded Head Hunters... at Phillips Academy tomorrow evening at 8:15, Harrison Forman will bring a pictorial panorama of the Far East aflame.

There the cards are being dealt for changed borders and revised maps; a whole continent is in an upheaval. Over 400 million Chinese people are fighting for their liberty; the ancient kingdom of Japan is in its second youth; Tibet comes into political prominence; the Gobi Desert is traversed by strange caravans of political significance; Moslemia fights with the richest government; the Russian bear growls on the Siberian border; local Russo-Japanese clashes threaten to develop into war.

In 1929 Forman organized the most amazing trek in 20th century exploration—the expedition over the Marco Polo Trail to Tibet.

B. P. W. to Request Town to Purchase Five New Trucks

Again To Request Bacteria Equipment

The $800 bacteria count equipment which went down without a fight last year will again be requested at the coming town meeting, according to the wishes of milk inspector Alfred Stacey as presented in his annual report. The $800 would also be used in part to improve the present inspector's quarters in the town hall.

If the equipment is not purchased, the inspector suggests the appropriation of $150 to have bacteria counts done out of town, but he states the equipment will save the town money in the long run. Last year there were 27 samples submitted for bacteria tests, he stated. The inspector estimates the cost if done outside at 73 cents per sample. If either appropriation is granted, he evidently plans to secure many more samples.

He also reported that the increasing milk business in town will make it necessary for him to have regular office hours one day a week.

WATER EXTENSION PROJECT

The Shlakis water extension in West Andover, on the warrant for the past several years, will again appear this year.

The Shlakis extension would cost $4400. The town will also be asked to reimburse Fred Gould $1,030.73 for the 400 feet of water main he installed on Salem street.

All special articles must be in by February 10.

The town will be asked to purchase five new trucks to do away with the great part of the present small truck hire expense at the coming town meeting, it was learned this week. It is thought that the trucks, with heavy-duty rear-ends, would cost $6,000 to $6,500. Exclusive of snow removal truck hire, it costs the town now about $18,000 a year for this item.

Trucks are used approximately 12,000 hours at $1.50 an hour. It is estimated that if the department had its own trucks, it could operate them at 85 cents an hour, including driver, depreciation, and all the other items in operating costs. A sizeable sum would be saved for instance in Shawshen where $3100 approximately was paid last year to a road foreman who used his own truck, the truck charge alone being $1500.

Another large saving would take place in the W. P. A. material and truck hire account. At present it costs $1.50 an hour for W. P. A. truck hire, including the driver who is either the owner or a man employed by him. Were the town to use its own trucks on this account, it would only cost about 25 cents an hour, a saving of $1.25 an hour, since the men who would operate them under this condition would be W. P. A. men whose wages would be paid by the W. P. A. and not by the town as is the present case.

The size of the present B. P. W. force would not be increased, the drivers being selected from the present force. It is probable that when the B. P. W. regular budgetary accounts come up, a motion will be made to consider the truck item first, since if the trucks are purchased, substantial cuts can be made in all the regular maintenance and construction items.

Dream of Dreams

Billy Ross down on North Main street contributes the following interesting bit of original poetry:

I'm a dreamer, aren't we all?
I dream of Summer, Spring and Fall.
When snow is on the ground I dream
Of a Summer's day beside a stream.
I dream of things I'd like to be
And of other things I'll never see.
Of all the thrills and escapes I've had
Some not so good some not so bad.
Of the old Brick-Yard, and our belly-flops
Of McDonough's barn, Cheesit the Cops.
Of all the apples and things I stole
I shall always feel upon my soul.
And of all the fish that I did play
And the bigger ones that got away.
Of all my friends and all my pals
Of Summer's nights and Frivolous Sals.
Of the things I'll do and the things I've done
Of the perfect times and unlimited fun.
And of all those short and happy years
Of joy and sorrow mingled with tears.
So as I read between these lines it seems I've come to the end of my dream of dreams.

LOOK

Way back in September Look magazine, in keeping with the great American tradition of choosing Miss Everybody, printed a picture of a young lady upon whom they bestowed the title: Miss Look. A young man here in Andover was burned up about it, and being an ardent camera fan, he took a picture of his sister, and mailed it to Look magazine. This week it appears in the magazine, a picture of the real Miss Look, first name Ernestine, contributed by brother Donald.

They say some of the doctors in town are a little envious of the free advertising that Donald's and Ernestine's father, Dr. Look, gets from the police department. One physician was seen one day shaking his head in despair as two men painted in big letters on a cross-walk right in the center of the town: LOOK.

"Are all men fools?" inquired the wife after a dispute with her husband.

"No dear," replied hubby, "some men are bachelors."

"What is your job?" we inquisitively asked the gentleman.

"Floorwalker in an angel foundry," he answered. Later we learned that he was watchman at a grade crossing.

Save By Giving Welfare Men the Work

Back at the time of the recent snowstorm and the following of a blizzard, there was some discussion about the possibility of employing men from the welfare rolls in the job of snow removal. Why can't we have an official understanding, fortified if necessary, by a town meeting resolution, that hereafter all men to be employed in extra town laborers' work should be selected from a list certified by the town welfare authorities?

These men, if not employed by the public works department, would still have to be paid by the welfare department. Under the present set-up the extra men hired in a snowstorm or for various projects are not necessarily the men who need the work the most, and there have been many complaints, justifiable ones apparently, that there are too many men from the same families who secure the work. That may be all right when there is plenty of employment for everyone, but when as is the case at present there's not enough to go around it's up to each and every one of our public officials to see that the town's money is spent on employment for those who need it the most, for men who have no one working in their families.

Of course the public works department needs a few men qualified in a particular line, but certainly when a snowstorm comes along, or when a ditch is being dug, there is no need for any special talent, inherited or developed.

Big, Red, Iron

We'd like to put in a word for one who you will recognize is an old friend of ours. His name is Mike—some say he's big, some say he's red, some say he's iron. But whatever you call him, this much is certain: that on the night of the annual town meeting, the Big Red Iron Mike will be the subject of a controversy. Today some of our orators are probably sharpening their verbal fangs, ready to bite into this juicy morsel.

Let's not waste time on it that night. It was probably an unwise arrangement to make; it has since, we understand, been declared illegal. But at the rate of seven dollars an hour, the town has been buying that huge machine; it already, whether it wanted to or not, has spent a substantial sum toward its purchase. That money cannot be brought back, whereas the investment can be protected by another $1500 or so to complete the purchase of a piece of equipment that undoubtedly will save on road maintenance and construction costs and in big drifting snowstorms.

At the annual town meeting last year, one of the members of the board of public works arose to state with commendable straightforwardness that the matter probably had been handled in an unfortunate way, but that when the board did make the original decision, it was under the impression that it was all right, having had the proposal examined and apparently approved by the then finance committee, the then board of selectmen and the then town counsel. It was a mistake, of course; but in deference to the spirit which prompted that statement last year, no mud need be thrown about it this year; and in order not to make the mistake any worse, it would seem best to spend a little more.

"President calls for Federal Taxation on Government Salaries; Would Add 300 Millions Revenue." "Tax Commissioner Advocates Sales Tax." Why in the name of heaven don't our public officials try to make the budgets balance by cutting expenditures instead of everlastingly seeking more money to spend?

From a Librarian's Notebook

By Miss Evelyn Robinson
Junior Librarian

Are fairy tales harmful for children? We have been asked this question many times. This has been a source of debate among educators and parents. Some feel that it is wrong to expose sensitive children to such stories as Red Riding Hood, Jack the Giant Killer, and the Three Little Pigs; while others feel that if one deprived them of these age old classics that it would rob them of something very vital to children. We feel that much depends upon the presentation of fairy tales. It is significant that usually very young children have no fear of them. They have not learned that there is anything sinister about "Off with their heads," or "Fe-fi-fo-fum"; neither do they concern themselves as to the cruel ending of the wicked wolf. Older children may be frightened when such tales are related or read, but it is often due to another's viewpoint, and whose unconscious thoughts may plant fear in their minds. Such as, "I never could read stories like that when I was a child," or saying, in front of them, "My children are so nervous, they lie awake all night, if they read fairy tales." Children have a strong sense of fairness, so that they expect the good to be rewarded and the bad punished. Certainly fairy tales are good material for moral instruction.

We saw Walter Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." We had been absorbing people's reaction to it. Some parents' thought it was charming; others, that it was not a suitable picture for children to see, because the witch was too grotesque, and that the scene where Snow White fled through the woods in terror, was too cruel. The children "loved it", for the most part. We heard too, that the picture was not going to be shown to English children. Consequently, we went to see Snow White with conflicting ideas. We expected a horrible witch, which when she appeared, did not look half as terrifying as an illustration in a fairy book, we once had, which revealed the witch as an old hag with hair hanging down in front of her eyes. We heard no children scream. Perhaps, they were used to the picture. Some of them told us that they had seen it six times! The scene in the woods could have been explained as the ugly fears we create for ourselves when we are frightened. Yes, children do have a remarkable aptitude for understanding situations if they are explained. We personally prefer the purer version of Grimm's fairy tales, for it is beautiful without catering to popular taste, and is of greater literary value, but one must confess that Walter Disney has succeeded admirably in re-creating a delightful fairy world in the minds of children and adults. For this he deserves great credit, for he has made the world fairy tale conscious. Wanda Gag has created a charming heroine in her Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs. She has caught the spirit of Grimm's fairy folk, and they have walked right into her illustrations.

Let us not deprive children of fairy tales, because of our grown-up prejudices and fears, or because we have forgotten our own childhood, but do what we can to introduce fanciful tales which will cultivate their imagination; for they are going to need it in this world of stern reality.

The following fairy tales will be enjoyed by children: Andersen, Fairy Tales; Barrie, Peter Pan; Bianco, Poor Cecco; Craik, Adventures of a Brownie; France, Honeybee; Grimm, Fairy tales, illus. and translated by Wanda Gag; Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs, illus. by Wanda Gag; Grahame, Wind in the Willows; Hudson, Little Boy Lost; Kipling, Just-so-Stories; MacDonald, At the Back of the North Wind; Patri, Pinocchio in America; Stockton, The Reformed Pirate; Williams, The Velveteen Rabbit.

It sounded like an echo last week, two or three echoes in fact. Actually it was Box 23 sounded three times for two and one-half fires, one at the Peatman home and one and one-half at the Walk-up home, the half being a repetition of the first smudge. The only damage was to the peace of mind of those residents who imagined a three-alarm blaze.

Pianist In Finale Of Concert Series

Phillips Academy will present the Franco-German pianist, Walter Giesecking, in the meeting room of George Washington, on Friday evening, February 17th. This is the third and final item of the subscription series sponsored by the music department. Those who attended the delightful concert by the Salzburg Trapp Choir are again assured of an artistic presentation of the highest order.

Mr. Giesecking's musical eminence may be judged by the fact that this is his ninth successful American tour, that his recording of Beethoven's Emperor Concerto has in two years sold over 45,000 copies and that his interpretations are considered those of the world's finest living pianist. His program for February 17th will include works of Bach, Mozart, Schumann, Liszt, and Debussy.

Members Attend State Meeting

Nine members of the Andover Historical Society attended on Saturday in Cambridge at Shepard Historical Society one of the most interesting of recent meetings of the Bay State Historical League. They were Mr. and Mrs. William A. Trow, Mrs. C. E. Abbott, Mrs. F. L. Brigham, Mrs. E. T. Brewster, Miss C. M. Underhill, Miss Betty Sherman, Miss Ella Penniman and Miss Annie Penniman.

The paper on church historical societies brought out a lively discussion. Delegates contrasted pre-revolutionary Christ church, o'd when Washington worshipped in it, with the latest thing in parish houses where they met. The high water mark was the visit to Craigie House, now virtually as Longfellow left it, guided by the poet's own grandson, who, incidentally, much resembles his forebear.

Historical Society To Hold Open House

The Andover Historical society will again, this year, keep open house on Washington's Birthday at 97 Main street to its members and their friends, along with any one else who is interested in the society's work and cares to come. The special attractions will be exhibits of dolls, of pewter, and of Mr. Charles W. Arnold's collection of Currier and Ives lithographs. The dolls and the pewter will be in part from the society's own collection, to show members what they possess, and partly borrowed for the occasion. Any one in town who has interesting dolls or pewter, especially if somehow related to Andover, will do the society a favor by loaning them for this occasion.

As last year, there will be experts on hand to explain the exhibits and to answer questions.

To Aid Clinic With Proceeds From Ball

Fifty dollars of the proceeds from the 100 tickets which is Andover's quota for the President's Birthday ball to be held January 30, will go to the Walker Memorial Clinic, formerly the Lawrence Clinic. The other $50 is to be sent to New York whence it will be disbursed for infantile paralysis treatments.

The Clinic was named after Andover's late Dr. Walker who more than any other single person was responsible for the organization and growth of this fine humanitarian service. A large number of Andover residents have been aided there in the past few years, and the fifty dollars would be used to help other Andover residents. Tickets at one dollar may be purchased from the mail carriers.

Mrs. Angus And Dr. Pfatteicher Play

Members of the Andover Musicians Club were guests last evening at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Carl Pfatteicher, 173 Main street. The program was provided by Mrs. John C. Angus and Dr. Pfatteicher, who played parts of a 4-hand piano arrangement of Bach's "Die Kunst der Fuge." Dr. Pfatteicher served as commentator.

To this work Bach himself gave no title, except to call each section a "counterpoint." It is a colossal score written on separate staves, with no hint of dynamics, tempi, or instrumentation, all of which suggests that Bach did not intend it for actual performance. A variety of transcriptions, however, have been made—for orchestra, for string quartet, for two pianos, and as heard last night for two performers at one piano, which makes performance particularly difficult because of the extreme complexity of the work. The organist, E. Power Biggs, played it last Monday at the Germanic Museum, Cambridge, and was highly commended for his performance.

Andover musicians consider themselves extremely fortunate to have friends who can bring them this rarely heard "Art of Fugue," for it is the very quintessence of the fugue form of musical composition.
